gress on the advisability of establishing to thorough and complete system of filtration in connection with the water supply of the District of Columbia.

with the wishes of Congress, which has long thought of the necessity of better-nary study as to the feasibility of inau-gurating a system of filtration. Physicians of repute have repeatedly pointed out the fact that the prevalence of typhoid in this city had been more or less directly attributable to the impure state of the present water supply. In most European cities, filtration beds and filtration machines are the means used for purifying the water supplies. The death rate of Washington is stated by the superintendent of the water department to be much larger than that of cities using the filtration system and considerably higher than that of European cities which make large ways of surface. to investigate and report on the filtration
